Historical Context and Development

Rubber hose animation emerged in the silent film era, primarily during the late 1910s and early 1920s. It is named after the flexible, tube-like limbs of characters, which resemble rubber hoses. Pioneered by studios like Bray Productions and later popularized by Walt Disney and Ub Iwerks, this style was instrumental in establishing the visual language of early American animation. Some key characteristics of early rubber hose animation include: - Limbs that are smooth, bendable, and without joints, allowing for exaggerated, flowing movements. - Simplified character designs that focus on expressive faces and minimal detail. - Emphasis on slapstick comedy and visual gags, which relied heavily on the fluidity of motion.

Key Early Works and Influences

Iconic characters such as Mickey Mouse, Felix the Cat, and Bimbo the Dog exemplify the charm and appeal of early rubber hose animation. These characters' lively, elastic motions set the standard for animation's expressive potential. Early influences stem from: - Vaudeville and slapstick comedy traditions - Stage magic and pantomime - The desire to create captivating, easily animated characters that could perform exaggerated actions with minimal effort
